Question:

Can someone provide a simple breakdown of the various federal programs created to help small businesses survive the COVID-19 economy?

Answer:

By Christopher Davis, CPA

As the last several months have shown, a lot can happen in a very short period of time. Congress has kept pace with these changes by passing several incentives designed to assist individuals and small businesses as we all continue to navigate through the COVID-19 pandemic.

These new incentives range from tax credits on wages paid to employees, to new loans available to small businesses, payroll tax deposit deferrals and several changes made to tax laws. As you've likely read much about many of these new incentives, including the Paycheck Protection Program (PPP) loan, we will focus this article on next steps within certain incentives and other COVID-19 relief items. Question:

How can I optimize my practice revenue?

Answer:

When it comes to optimizing your practice revenue, the first thing to understand is that all patient volume is not created equal. Break down your case mix and payer mix to see how much you're actually being paid by patient type and by payer so that you can target referrals with the highest return.

Also, reduce turnover in your patient base by ensuring that patients are not lost to follow-up, have a high satisfaction rate and are staying current with their recurring appointments. It costs more to bring in new volume than it does to keep the existing. Lastly, consider alternative revenue streams...
